LIBERAL ARTS & SCIENCES: AN EDUCATION THAT MATTERS.

YOU WANT AN EDUCATION THAT MATTERS

and endures, one that will challenge you to ask big questions about the world, your future, and yourself. You want to make a difference not just in your life but in the lives of others. You want to explore – and possibly change – the world. You're in the right place.

The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences is the foundation of education at the State University of New York at New Paltz, providing most of the general education curriculum for all students. It is also the launching pad for careers and graduate and professional education for students who major in LA&S. We are the largest and most diverse academic unit, home to seventeen departments and programs in the Humanities and Social Sciences, as well as host or co-host to a growing number of interdisciplinary programs.

Our classes are small, allowing you to work closely with faculty in both introductory and major subjects. In addition to being wonderful teachers, our faculty are well-respected scholars whose works are published in their fields' top journals and by prestigious university presses. We offer an expansive array of opportunities for undergraduate research, internships, study abroad experiences, and living-learning communities. We hope you'll join us as you prepare for a lifetime of questioning, learning, and growing.

Please visit the web pages of our departments and programs to learn more about our offerings.

The light on the camera is still red... cue cards and green screen are all in place and the lights are hot...you are focused on your posture and where you need to stand. As the camera light turns green, you smile and you know you are ready for this.

LA&S COURSES FORM THE CORE OF THE CAMPUS-WIDE GENERAL EDUCATION PROGRAM, as well as most of the traditional liberal arts disciplines.

In our classes, students learn to think critically and creatively and to express themselves in speech and writing with clarity and precision. Students in all majors are encouraged to engage in advanced research in capstone courses, as well as fieldwork, internships, service learning, and study abroad to test theory and knowledge in real-world situations. We prepare students to become productive, responsible citizens of the world.

DEPARTMENTS AND PROGRAMS

www.newpaltz.edu/anthropology

Anthropology explores human diversity across geographic space and evolutionary time in four sub-fields:

- Archaeology investigates the behaviors and cultural patterns of past human societies by examining material artifacts.
- Biological Anthropology considers the biological diversity and evolution of humans and our closest primate relatives.
- Cultural Anthropology considers social and cultural diversity among living populations.
- Linguistic Anthropology studies social and cultural dimensions of language.

From these diverse perspectives, anthropologists study such wide-ranging topics as human evolution, culture change, health, nutrition and disease, personality, family and marriage, politics, gender, and sexuality. Training in the concepts and methods of anthropology prepares students to make sense of the multi-cultural, globalized world in which we live.

A background in anthropology is a valuable asset in today's job market. The skills that you learn as a major are applicable to a wide range of academic and professional careers, including in education, international development, public health, social and environmental activism, contract archaeology, cultural resource management, museum studies, government and business.

BLACK STUDIES

www.newpaltz.edu/blackstudies

This program explores and analyzes the history and cultures of African people in the United States, the Caribbean, and Africa.

Black Studies illuminates the contributions of African people to world culture, correcting traditional approaches that have tended to bypass the Black Diaspora experience. In Black Studies courses students examine the impact of current economic, social, and political forces on the Black experience, gain a basic understanding of the unique issues facing people of African ancestry today, and study their artistic expressions and contributions.

Black Studies at New Paltz was established in 1969, making it one of the first in the country.

Black Studies courses create opportunities for research and creative activity on campus and in the community. Students may focus on liberal arts and social studies, or opt for a major in Elementary Education/Black Studies to qualify for teacher certification.

COMMUNICATION

www.newpaltz.edu/communication

The Department of Communication studies how people send and receive messages in different contexts. Majors can concentrate in interpersonal/intercultural communication, organizational communication, or public relations. The interpersonal/intercultural concentration in communication emphasizes human contact in a variety of contexts. In this concentration, intercultural communication dynamics are folded together with interpersonal communication, providing students with a broad spectrum of human communication knowledge and skills. Organizational communication offers students a chance to analyze numerous organizational processes that will enable them to better understand how communicative behaviors are central to organizing. Students examine interpersonal or group relations, informal and formal communication practices, elements of power within organizations, and interaction with computer technology. The public relations concentration in communication is a unique program offering courses that cover historical, technological, critical, and ethical analyses and overviews of public relations. Students learn persuasive tactics in multi-media formats (from

COMMUNICATION DISORDERS

www.newpaltz.edu/commdis

This program offers preparation in speech-language pathology and audiology, emphasizing the nature of communication disorders across the life span, the scientific bases of clinical work, cultural diversity, professional ethics, and health care delivery systems.

Our on-site Speech-Language and Hearing Center provides valuable training with a large and varied caseload and state-of-the-art equipment.

Our network of external clinical practicum sites offers a wide variety of opportunities to work with major hospitals, rehabilitation centers, nursing homes, preschools, public schools, and private practices.

DIGITAL MEDIA & JOURNALISM

www.newpaltz.edu/digitalmediajournalism

The Department of Digital Media and Journalism (DMJ) is one of the largest academic departments on campus, with more than 350 majors in Journalism, Digital Media Production and Digital Media Management. The department has 13 full-time faculty, many of whom are also industry professionals in film (documentary), journalism, and photography. The disciplines represented combine methods from both the humanities and social sciences in the study of how people share, represent, interpret and receive/send ideas through the media. The faculty of digital media and journalism value freedom of speech and the press as tools for informing and promoting a democratic dialogue. The programs are based on a strong liberal arts platform that is theoretical and practical with required internship and fieldwork along with respective capstone seminars for all majors.

The department draws from the traditional strengths of a Liberal Arts education, prepares its majors for graduate degrees and professional pursuits, and supports their intellectual and professional growth. Faculty also play a significant role at the Legislative Gazette, a weekly newspaper published by journalism students in Albany, which focuses on the business of the New York state government (online only as of Spring 2016). In addition, we have The Little Rebellion e-zine and various other pre-professional production pieces.

Students and faculty have won audio and video awards from various venues at regional and national competitions. Students have published in such regional and national newspapers as the Poughkeepsie Journal, Times Herald Record, and the New York Times. Our majors have a very high success rate in getting great internships and gainful employment regionally and nationally.

The department offers the college's only endowed visiting professorship and has had Pulitzer Prize-winning journalists and best-selling authors on campus to teach classes. DMJ students and faculty have earned regional, state and national awards for journalism, documentaries, and public service announcements. State-of-the-art editing software for audio, video, graphics, publishing, and green-screen, along with iMac labs, dedicated video and editing studios, and a recently upgraded professional television studio are available 24 hours to DMJ majors.

ECONOMICS

www.newpaltz.edu/economics

No dimension of human activity is unaffected by economic forces. Economics helps us understand social and political problems, such as economic recessions, unemployment, distribution of income and poverty, taxation and economic behavior, labor relations, and terms of international trade. Economics is, therefore, central to our lives as informed, articulate, and responsible citizens.

DEDICATED FACULTY

OUR FACULTY IS DEDICATED TO EXCELLENCE IN TEACHING AND SCHOLARSHIP. MANY ARE ALSO WELL-KNOWN AUTHORITIES IN THEIR DISCIPLINES. WORKING WITH OUR FACULTY ON ADVANCED RESEARCH PROJECTS CAN BE A TRANSFORMATIVE EXPERIENCE.

VIEW PROFESSOR GREG BRAY'S VIDEO AT WWW.NEWPALTZ.EDU/ADMISSIONS

The economics program prepares students for careers in private and public sectors. In addition to general economics, the program offers concentrations in business and international economics. Alumni often find employment in the banking sector, government sector, and consulting firms.

Research opportunities with faculty are also available, as are two merit-based annual scholarships to juniors and seniors.

The Economics Honor Society (Omicron Delta Epsilon) and the Economics Club are committed to promoting economic literacy on campus and in our community. Students have organized trips to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, the New York Stock Exchange, and to various economic conferences. They also regularly participate in organizing economics lectures and conferences on campus.

www.newpaltz.edu/english

Our literary heritage has a far-reaching influence on our lives. It nourishes our understanding and expression of life's ordinary and extraordinary experiences; it helps us reinvent those experiences creatively in poems, stories, essays, and plays; and it is essential to our development of critical thinking and writing skills.

Students may choose from one of the following undergraduate programs in English:

- Liberal Arts
- Creative Writing
- Early Childhood Education (Birth-Grade 2)
- Childhood Education (Grades 1-6)
- Adolescence Education (Grades 7-12).

The Department of English also offers the following graduate programs: Masters of Arts; Master of Arts in Teaching; Master of Science in Education-Adolescence (Grades 7-12).

Department publications include New Voices, New Visions, an annual anthology of the best work in our freshman writing courses; The Stonestrow Review, an annual literary journal of the Creative Writing program featuring the best student writing of the year; and The Shawangunk Review, featuring literary criticism and creating writing of our graduate students.

Student Highlight

AKEEM SAMUELS, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Psychology major, sociology and disaster studies minor. Resident assistant, EOP office assistant, intern at the New Paltz Youth Program and New Paltz Middle School.

I'm from Brooklyn, N.Y. I was born in Antigua-Barbuda, but I moved to Guyana when I was 4 years old and I came to the United States when I was 16. I came to SUNY New Paltz because I wanted to get a feel for being on my own to develop my independence...I'm really happy that I made the decision.

For some people, helping others just comes naturally. For me, just being there for someone is very important. I genuinely care about what someone has to say. I try to take the time to see how that person's day is going. So I thought about my personality and realized that a psychology major was the best fit for me.

SEE AKEEM'S STORY AT WWW.NEWPALTZ.EDU/ADMISSIONS

My first day at the New Paltz Youth Center, where I intern, I was super nervous! I remember Marco*, a student at the Center, needed help dealing with a situation. I was there to help him, to the best of my ability, and he was very thankful, which meant a great deal to me, and still does.

GEOGRAPHY

www.newpaltz.edu/geography

Focusing on the spatial patterns and relationships found on the earth's surface, geographers provide perspectives and skills for understanding a tremendous range of issues: environmental quality, watershed management, soils, resource distribution, regional planning, population problems, migration patterns, ethnic conflicts, territorial disputes, international affairs and social inequalities based on gender and ethnicity.

Geography students will learn to use Geographic Information Systems (GIS), a critical skill in many public and private sector work environments and a technique that is changing the way research is conducted. In addition to GIS, students also receive training in cartography and remote sensing.

HISTORY

www.newpaltz.edu/history

The Department of History promotes understanding of the past through original scholarship and innovative teaching. Historians study change and continuity over time as a means of gaining multiple perspectives on the human experience, understanding how societies function, and informing decisions in the present and future. We also practice and teach the skills of the historian—the ability to analyze documents, to formulate arguments, to appreciate the importance of context, and to conduct independent research—which serve students well in a variety of careers and communities.

The Department of History at New Paltz is a community of scholars committed to excellence in teaching, research, and service. That commitment shows in the classroom, where we provide a student-centered approach emphasizing historical consciousness, critical inquiry, individualized research, engaged discussions, and development of written and oral arguments. History faculty receive national and international recognition for their work and are also active community members who participate in local public history projects and educational activities.

Our small research seminars allow students to produce original works of history in areas that interest them. Beyond coursework, the department connects students with regional historical societies and historic sites to provide opportunities for seminars, fieldwork experiences, and internships. History majors have completed internships at the Franklin Delano Roosevelt Library and Museum in Hyde Park, NY and Historic Huguenot Street in New Paltz, among others. Graduates of the History Department have attended prestigious law, graduate, and professional schools, ranging from Harvard to the University of Iceland. They have gone on to careers in the fields of education, historic interpretation, information science, journalism, law, government, and business.

LANGUAGES, LITERATURES & CULTURES

www.newpaltz.edu/foreign_lang

In a time of growing internationalization, the Department of Languages, Literatures & Cultures advances foreign language proficiency and multi-cultural and global understanding. Currently, we offer instruction in Arabic, Chinese, French, German, Italian, Japanese, Hebrew, Kiswahili, Portuguese, and Spanish with majors in French and Spanish and contract majors in Italian Studies, German Studies, Romance Languages, and Translation Studies.

We train teachers and prepare students for graduate study in a variety of disciplines and careers in many fields including business, industry, education, and government. The department achieves its goals through diverse and interdisciplinary research, support of excellence in teaching, and experiences in and out of the classroom designed to enhance language acquisition, the study of literature and culture, and international awareness. The department is central to the university's general education requirements, to its diversity mission, and to the fulfillment of the university's role as a center of humanistic inquiry.

The Department of Languages, Literatures & Cultures collaborates with other departments to offer language and content courses in interdisciplinary programs in a broad range of areas including Ancient Studies, Asian Studies, Latin American and Caribbean Studies, Medieval and Early Modern Studies, Women's Studies, and the Honors Program.

In all of our degree programs, students gain knowledge of the complexity of language, the art of literary expression, and the richness of cultural traditions and practices. With the increasing importance of international business and the multinational character of American society itself, knowledge of a second language is an asset favored by employers in nearly every occupation.

Some of our students combine the study of one or more languages to become teachers, translators or interpreters, while others seek to complement their studies in anthropology, art, art history, communications, history, international business, international relations, journalism, the sciences and other fields. As an integral part of our mission, we facilitate study and internships abroad to qualified undergraduate and graduate students. We enable students to value and acquire knowledge of language, culture, and literature, and make informed cultural comparisons, even after they complete their coursework. Our department plays a pivotal role in providing students with communication skills in languages and knowledge of literatures and cultures essential for them to function effectively as global citizens, whatever their field of professional expertise.

PHILOSOPHY

www.newpaltz.edu/philosophy

The Philosophy major emphasizes core areas in philosophy, including logic, ethics, theory of knowledge, and metaphysics. Philosophy majors get a strong foundation in the history of western philosophy and in nonwestern philosophy as well. We offer courses that examine philosophical questions about religion, language, art, literature, love, life and death, in areas such as existentialism, environmental ethics, and more.

The philosophy major is relatively small (just 36 credits), which makes it easy to combine with a minor or even a second major in another subject, as many of our students do.

Students in our program develop strong skills in reading, writing, analysis, and persuasion, skills useful in every career and profession. Recent students have entered graduate school in law, philosophy, counseling, social work, urban planning, agriculture management, and logic and computation. Our graduates work in business, publishing, information technology, government, teaching, and other fields. In addition, studying philosophy is one of the most interesting things you can do in college, with benefits that last one's whole life.

POLITICAL SCIENCE

www.newpaltz.edu/polisci_intrela

Political Science first and foremost studies power and collective decision-making, whether at the level of the state or by sub-state actors. We provide students with the basic building blocks to inquire, understand, and evaluate the basic elements of political and extra-political processes which help share our collective understandings of community, identity, justice, and citizenship.

Mastery of the building blocks enable closer examination of specific issues such as global warming, health care policy, military conflicts, federal-state governmental relations, and civil liberties and civil rights clashes.

We offer programs that integrate academic rigor with real-world experience at the local, state, federal, and international levels, both in and out of the classroom. Students focus on a particular subfield: American politics, comparative politics, political theory, international politics, public law, public administration, or public policy.

PSYCHOLOGY

www.newpaltz.edu/psychology

The Department of Psychology is dedicated to providing students with broad knowledge in the methods, findings, and applications related to human behavior, thought, and emotion. As psychologists, we strive to uphold the scientist-practitioner model, applying research results to best help individuals and groups tackle problems.

Collectively, our faculty have expertise and interests that span the diverse fields that make up the discipline of psychology:

- Cognitive Psychology and Cognitive Neuroscience—cognitive psychology is the study of sensation and perception, learning, language, memory, thinking, and judgment and decision making; cognitive neuroscience is concerned with how brain systems affect cognition.
- Counseling Psychology—the application of psychological principles to the practice of therapy to help individuals better understand themselves and cope with life changes.
- Developmental Psychology—the study of the cognitive, emotional, moral, and social development of individuals across the life span.
- Evolutionary Psychology—the study of how principles of biological evolution have shaped human emotion, thought, and behavior.
- Health Psychology—the study of how physiological, cognitive, emotional, and social factors affect health and illness, stress and well-being, and health behaviors.
- Industrial-Organizational Psychology—the application of psychological principles to human thought, emotion and behavior within organizations.
- School Psychology—the application of psychological principles to the assessment of student strengths and needs and the development of educational plans to meet those needs.
- Social Psychology—the study of how humans think about and interact with each other, either individually or in groups.

STUDENTS FROM INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS, JOURNALISM, POLITICAL SCIENCE, AND SOCIOLOGY, AS WELL AS STUDENTS FROM OTHER DEPARTMENTS AND MAJORS, HAVE THE OPPORTUNITY TO WITNESS, AND PARTICIPATE IN, SOCIAL MOVEMENTS IN NEW YORK CITY, WASHINGTON, D.C. AND BEYOND.

SOCIOLOGY

www.newpaltz.edu/sociology

If we want to understand why people behave and think as they do, we need to examine the social conditions under which people live.

Sociologists study the relationship between societies' organization and problems, such as poverty, crime, inequality, racism, gender discrimination, and ecological degradation. Analyzing the origins of these problems provides us with insight into how to solve them.

While all sociology majors share many core requirements, our program offers three options:

- The basic sociology program, which explores a wide array of sociological topics
- The concentration in human services, which prepares students to work with people in need of support; and
- The concentration of criminology, which is designed for students with a focused interest in the issue of crime.

INTERDISCIPLINARY MAJORS

www.newpaltz.edu/collegelas

www.newpaltz.edu/asianstudies

Asian Studies is an interdisciplinary program, drawing on the expertise of faculty from more than a dozen departments in the college, with the broad mission of promoting greater awareness and understanding of East Asia, South Asia, and Southeast Asia.

The Asian Studies program faculty teach interdisciplinary courses for undergraduate and graduate students, augmented by a superb library collection of books and periodicals on Asia. The New Paltz campus serves as a base for the New York Conference on Asian Studies (NYCAS), one of eight regional conferences of the Association for Asian Studies. Its annual meetings bring together people interested in Asia for a full spectrum of both academic and non-academic papers, panels, presentations, and performances related to Asia. The program also holds an annual spring festival and special film screenings.

Why Study Asia?

Graduates with an informed, global perspective and expertise in Asia are sought by employers in a wide range of professions.

Overseas Programs

The Asian Studies Program strongly encourages study abroad by providing academic advising for students interested in studying and teaching in Asia.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

www.newpaltz.edu/polisci_intlrela

International Relations is the study of behavior among states and nations. The primary objective of this interdisciplinary field is to understand the various elements, such as history, economics, area studies, political processes and institutions (governmental, non-governmental, and intergovernmental), that play a role in how nations interact with each other.

The discipline utilizes both qualitative and quantitative modes of analysis to explain events and behavior, to predict future outcomes, and to understand the complex forces that shape the international system. This field explores such issues as security, war and peace, international economics, environment, development, immigration, civil society, terrorism, and human rights. It draws courses from political science, history, economics, geography, black studies, anthropology, and sociology.

LATIN AMERICAN AND CARIBBEAN STUDIES

www.newpaltz.edu/las

The Latin American and Caribbean Studies Program is designed to give students a comprehensive understanding of the diverse cultures and complex historical and contemporary relationships of Mexico, Central and South America, the Caribbean, and Latinas and Latinos in the United States.

Students explore artistic, cultural and linguistic expression; contemporary and historical events; and economic, political, and social issues that affect the region. Coursework extends across the social sciences and humanities, including anthropology, economics, education, geography, history, international relations, music, sociology, and women's studies. Majors achieve proficiency in Spanish, Portuguese, or French, and complete an original senior research project with mentorship under a program faculty member.

The program promotes multiple campus activities, including academic symposia, cultural events, and participation in campus student associations related to Latin America and the Caribbean. Many majors and minors participate in study-abroad programs, which include courses, service learning and internships in Argentina, Brazil, Ecuador and Mexico. Through academic, extracurricular, and international study experiences, students gain valuable language, research, and cross-cultural skills that will make them competitive in today's job market.

WOMEN'S, GENDER, AND SEXUALITY STUDIES

www.newpaltz.edu/wmnstudies

WGSS is both a major and a minor, encompassing the interdisciplinary study of women, gender, and sexuality. Drawing upon the expertise of faculty jointly appointed in other departments (history, economics, sociology, English) as well as faculty based fully in WGSS, the program enables students to develop a feminist perspective on traditional disciplines and to cross disciplinary boundaries in order to explore women's and LGBTQ experiences in the U.S. and globally.

Students examine the ways that gender intersects with other systems of domination, think critically about ways to challenge violence and injustice, and work together to envision a more just and humane world. The capstone to the major in the senior year includes a seminar in WGSS as well as a Practicum that allows students to gain real world experience in placements related to their interests. Regular placements include the following: working in the New Paltz school system with teen and adolescent girls, providing assistance at a regional domestic violence shelter, performing educational outreach at Planned Parenthood of the Hudson Valley, working for a local women's artist collective, and curating women's history exhibits at Huguenot Street or Eleanor Roosevelt's residence at Val Kill. Each of these placements allow students to bridge feminist theory and praxis.

The WGSS Program is committed to improving the lives of women and LGBTQ identified individuals on campus and in our community. It sponsors lectures, panels, film series, and biennially hosts an interdisciplinary conference on themes as varied as reproductive justice; sex, money and power; women and science; and women, war, and peace, in collaboration with local feminist organizations in the community. The program additionally sponsors Rivera House, an LGBTQ+ themed Living Learning Community in Lenape Hall on campus, supporting academic programming in the residence hall long after classes finish.

INTERDISCIPLINARY MINORS

ANCIENT STUDIES

www.newpaltz.edu/ancientstudies

Ancient Studies is an interdisciplinary program that lets students focus on studying the world before the Middle Ages. Courses allow students to study a broad range of temporal and geographical topics from a variety of perspectives. Our offerings cover everything from the Paleolithic period to the late Roman Empire, including the Near East (Israel, Mesopotamia, Persia and their neighbors), Egypt, Greece, Rome, China, India, Japan, and all regions in between. The minor also encompasses the study of the cultures of the Americas before the arrival of the Europeans in the fifteenth century, including the North American Indians, the Maya, the Inca and the Aztecs. With courses in anthropology, art history, english, history, philosophy, and political science, students in the Ancient Studies Minor can explore and learn about the ancient world from almost any angle.

DEAF STUDIES

www.newpaltz.edu/ugc/las/deaf_studies

The Deaf Studies minor is open to all students majoring in all disciplines, but may be especially attractive to students in liberal arts and sciences, business, and theatre. It is designed to develop the use of American Sign Language (ASL) and prepare students for further education in sign language interpretation or deaf education. ASL is present in every realm of life as deaf, hearing impaired, and deaf-blind people seek education and equitable employment. This minor will increase students' understanding of hearing loss, deafness, and deaf culture, and will allow students to communicate with deaf persons at a basic level, as well as gain cultural knowledge. Its offerings are available through the following programs: communication disorders, sociology, psychology, and communication.

DISASTER STUDIES

www.newpaltz.edu/idmh

Working in collaboration with SUNY New Paltz professionals and community leaders, the Institute for Disaster Mental Health (IDMH) offers education and training in disaster mental health, including conferences, workshops, and seminars that reflect recent research and best practices.

The IDMH programs include training and consulting in disaster mental health for professionals, paraprofessionals, and community members. The interdisciplinary undergraduate minor focuses on disasters of natural, technological, and human-induced origin and on how these affect individuals, communities, organizations, and the nation. Those completing the minor will become certified responders for the American Red Cross.

ENVIRONMENTAL STUDIES

www.newpaltz.edu/environmentalstudies

The Environmental Studies minor gives an overview of the causes and consequences of current environmental problems such as global warming, spread of disease, environmental degradation, extinction of species, or lack of biodiversity. Students in this program gain the basic tools and understandings necessary to become active participants in the solutions to these problems. Course work draws from anthropology, chemistry, geography, geology, mathematics, political science and sociology. [See School of Science and Engineering Viewbook as well.]

EVOLUTIONARY STUDIES

www.newpaltz.edu/evos

Funded partly with a grant awarded by the National Science Foundation, the Evolutionary Studies program fosters opportunities for faculty and students to

- develop a deep understanding of evolutionary ideas,
- conduct cross-disciplinary research using evolution as a synthesizing paradigm, and
- contribute to novel ideas across disciplines guided by evolutionary reasoning.

[See School of Science and Engineering Viewbook as well.]

FILM AND VIDEO STUDIES

www.newpaltz.edu/ugc/las/film_studies

The Film and Video Studies minor is an interdisciplinary program between the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences and the School of Fine and Performing Arts. Students will learn critical approaches to film and video, and acquire historical, theoretical, intercultural, and practical tools to study films and video from around the world. They will familiarize themselves with reading the art of cinema as cultural critics, and have the option to learn the basics of screenwriting and production.

ITALIAN STUDIES

www.newpaltz.edu/ugc/las/foreign_lang/italian/html

Italian Studies is a program for students seeking a comprehensive understanding of Italy and its contributions to Western Civilization. The minor builds upon a strong language foundation—the key that opens the world of Italian art, literature, history, music and philosophy. Highly motivated students are encouraged to apply for a contract major in Italian. The contract major is usually completed by combining Italian courses on campus with a semester or more of study in Italy.

JEWISH STUDIES

www.newpaltz.edu/ugc/las/jewish_stud/index.html

Drawing on a number of disciplines including history, international relations, languages, religion, culture, and literature, the Jewish Studies program enables students to study the social, historical, artistic, intellectual, and political experiences of Jews. Jewish Studies works with the Louis and Mildred Resnick Institute for the Study of Modern Jewish Life, which hosts an annual lecture series.

www.newpaltz.edu/polisci_intlrela/programs_minors.html

The Law and Politics program introduces students to the nature and principles of the legal system. Required and elective courses examine

- the role of law in America,
- the history, organization, and dynamics of legal institutions,
- the relationship of law to contemporary social questions,
- legal principles governing business, commerce, and labor, and
- law in the contemporary international system.

The Law and Politics minor draws courses from political science, philosophy, sociology, journalism, black studies, women's studies, business, and economics.

LINGUISTICS

www.newpaltz.edu/linguistics

Linguistics is the scientific study of language—its structure and use, how humans acquire it, how they represent it and process it in the brain, how it varies by speaker and situation, and how it changes over time. Linguists explore both the diversity of human languages and their common patterns.

Linguistics is an interdisciplinary program with strong ties to the departments of communication disorders, communication and media, psychology, philosophy, black studies, english, and languages, literatures & cultures.

MEDIEVAL & EARLY MODERN STUDIES

www.newpaltz.edu/mems/index.html

Medieval and Early Modern Studies is an interdisciplinary program that builds on the strengths of New Paltz faculty who specialize in Europe and its colonies from the end of the Roman Empire to the transition to the modern world ushered in by the French and Industrial Revolutions.

The focus on this time and place provides students with rich material for understanding Western cultural, intellectual, political, and social development. They will learn of the origins and development of modern institutions like capitalism, university education, centralized states and legal systems. They will discover ways of thinking both familiar and foreign as they study the arts, ideas, cultures, and faiths of the past. The minor includes courses in history, literature, religion, philosophy, and political theory. By bringing separate disciplines together and cutting across the traditional boundaries of the liberal and fine arts, this program exposes students to varied perspectives and methodological approaches unified by the time and place under study.

The minor thus provides the critical thinking and familiarity with the fine and language arts that medieval and early modern intellectuals, universities, and academies advocated as the basis for forming an educated, liberated mind.

NATIVE AMERICAN STUDIES

www.newpaltz.edu/ugc/las/native_american_stud/index.html

Native American Studies builds on the strengths of New Paltz faculty who specialize in Native American archaeology, Native American history, and Native American ethnography as well as geography and literature. The focus of this program is to expose students to 14,000+ years of Native American archaeology and ethnography from the southern cone of South America to Alaska. Students will learn about the history of specific Native American societies, their languages, technology, economy, kinship and belief systems. Drawing on courses in history, literature, and anthropology, students will explore the unique heritage and significant contributions of the first Americans. They will also develop a perspective on current Native American views of American Society.

RELIGIOUS STUDIES

www.newpaltz.edu/religiousstudies

The Religious Studies minor helps students examine religion from the perspective of different disciplines, including anthropology, art history, history, literature, philosophy, political science, and sociology. Some courses concern religion in general, while others focus on particular religious traditions, texts, and practices.
